"A Man's Man"

Synopsis

John Stuart Webster (J. Warren Kerrigan), after touring the country in a vain hunt for colorful adventure, returns to his native Denver and gets the thrill of his young life in his first day home. While walking the main street his attention is attracted by the cries of a beautiful girl, who tries to fight off a burly foreigner bent on embracing her. Webster rushes to her rescue and with one blow from his trusty right hurled the man into the road. The girl, who proves to be Dolores Ruey (Lois Wilson), is profuse in her thanks and permits Webster to escort her home. A close friendship follows between the two and it isn't long before Webster has it firmly settled in his mind that Dolores is the girl of his heart. While busily engaged in his courtship Webster gets word from his old pal, Billy Geary (Kenneth Harlan), asking him to hurry to Buenaventura, Central America, to assist him in fighting off the natives who covet Geary's property. On his way south Webster meets a gallant young man, who claimed to be a son of the former president of the republic but feared to go back to his country.

Webster furnishes him with a disguise and succeeds in slipping him into Buenaventura. Imagine John's surprise when several weeks later he finds Dolores in the same town! She has come to visit her benefactress, Mother Jenks (Ida Lewis). She meets Geary, who immediately falls in love with her, not knowing that his friend Webster had any claim on her. Thinking Dolores returns Billy's love, John urges their marriage. He later assists the ex-president's son's plans for a revolution and the latter succeeds in regaining his rightful office. Here John gets another surprise when he learns that the man, he smuggled into the country is Dolores' brother. Though happy at her change in fortune she is grieved by Webster's failure to pay her court. But her grief is shortlived. For as soon as his mind is cleared of the misapprehension that she loves Billy, John proposes to Dolores and is accepted.
